PREFACE

A nominal list of deaths which occurred among the commissioned personnel of the Medical Department was published in Volume I, "The Medical Department of the U. S. Army in the World War." Since that list was prepared, it has been necessary to make a number of changes in it. Consequently, it seems desirable at this time to publish a corrected one and to add to it the names of the members of the Army Nurse Corps who died in service during this period. The list of the commissioned officers in its present form was prepared by Lt. Col. Charles W. Ayars, Sanitary Reserve Corps, and that of the Army nurses by Major Julia C. Stimson, Superintendent, Army Nurse Corps. The names of all who died from any cause while in active service between April 1, 1917 and June 30, 1920 are included.

The account of the "Earliest American Casualties" is from an article by Major General Robert U. Patterson, Surgeon General, U.S. Army (then Lt. Colonel), which was printed in "The Military Surgeon" in October, 1925. General Patterson was Commanding Officer of U. S. A. Base Hospital No. 5 when it went overseas in May, 1917, and was also in command when the casualties occurred in that unit on September 4, 1917.

MEDICAL SERVICE IN THE WORLD WAR

When the United States entered the World War on April 6, 1917, the strength* of the Regular Army, including the Philippine Scouts, was 133,111,¹ and that of the National Guard was 164,292.² The Medical Department of the Regular Army at that time consisted of:³ Medical Corps, 842 officers, including 342 active reserves and 9 contract surgeons; Dental Corps, 86; Veterinary Corps, 60; Army Nurse Corps, 403; enlisted men, 6,619.

When the Armistice was signed on November 11, 1918, the Army numbered* 3,673,888⁴. At that time the Medical Department⁵ consisted of Medical Corps, 31,501; Dental Corps, 4,510; Veterinary Corps, 1,982; Sanitary Corps, 2,895; Ambulance Corps, 207; Army Nurse Corps, 21,480; and enlisted men, 264,181.

The total number of individuals who saw service in the Army during the period of the war was 4,122,930.² The response to the call by the medical and the allied professions was truly magnificent, and 34,837 of approximately 146,000⁶ qualified physicians and surgeons in the country, or 23.9 per cent of them saw service. The total number in the other corps and branches of the Medical Department were: Dental Corps, 4,668; Veterinary Corps, 2,610; Sanitary Corps, 3,216; Ambulance Corps, 212; Army Nurse Corps, 23,159. The number of men who served as enlisted in the Medical Department is not known, but as stated above, the greatest number at any one time was 264,181.

* Not including the members of the Army Nurse Corps.

When war was declared in April, 1917, there were in the United States in 131 station hospitals scattered throughout the country, 5,380 beds; in four general hospitals, 1,200; and in five temporary base hospitals on the Mexican Border, 2,950, a total of 9,530 ⁷. These hospital facilities were expanded so that when the Armistice was signed, there were available for the treatment of the military sick in the United States approximately 121,000 hospital beds; and in Europe, 282,000 ⁶ including 25,000 in convalescent camps.

When the British (Balfour) Mission arrived in Washington in April, 1917, soon after the declaration of war by The Congress, it requested that medical assistance be sent to their Army as soon as possible. Consequently, six base hospitals which had been organized by a corresponding number of large hospitals from their personnel, sailed for Europe between the 8th and 25th of May, 1917. They were the first American Units to go overseas after the declaration of war. These hospitals were, in their order of sailing⁶: Base Hospital No. 4, Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio; Base Hospital No. 5, Harvard University, Boston, Massachusetts; Base Hospital No. 2, Presbyterian Hospital, New York, N. Y.; Base Hospital No. 10, Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.; Base Hospital No. 21, Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.; and Base Hospital No. 12, Northwestern University, Chicago, Illinois.

EARLIEST AMERICAN BATTLE CASUALTIES IN THE WORLD WAR.

Ever since the World War, conflicting statements have appeared in the public press with reference to the first casualties that occurred among our forces. The first officers and men of the U. S. Army who were killed during the World War were members of the Medical Department, and consequently these facts may very appropriately be set forth in a medico-military publication. They should be of interest to the medical profession and to the general public, and for the sake of historical accuracy these data should be available. All statements made here can be corroborated by official records of the War Department. At least one bibliographical reference is made in each case to assist in finding the information.

The first American wounded in the World War was Capt. Louis J. Genella, M.R.C., U.S. Army, who had been appointed from the State of Louisiana. Captain Genella was serving with the British Expeditionary Forces in Flanders when he was wounded on the head and face by shell fire while in action July 14, 1917. His wounds, although not sufficiently severe to necessitate his relief from duty, were quite painful.¹

The second person to be wounded, and the first one seriously so, was a woman. Miss Beatrice M. McDonald,² U.S. Army Base Hospital No. 2 (originally organized from the Presbyterian Hospital, New York City), a member of the Army Nurse Corps. was wounded by a fragment of shell on August 17, 1917, while on duty at Casualty Clearing Station No. 61, British Expeditionary Forces, France. The wound resulted in the loss of one of Miss McDonald's eyes.

The third individual to be injured by the enemy was First Lieut. Philip M. Stimson, M.C.,³ U.S. Army, who was wounded by a high explosive shell about 2 a.m., September 4, 1917, while serving with a Field Ambulance of the British Expeditionary Forces in Flanders. Lieut. Stimson, after being wounded, was transferred from the Third Canadian Stationary Hospital to No. 20 General Hospital, British Expeditionary Forces at Dannes-Camiérs, arriving there September 6, 1917. He remained in the latter hospital until September 18, 1917 when he was moved in an ambulance to U. S. Army Base Hospital No. 21 at Rouen, France (Washington University, St. Louis, Mo. unit), where he had friends and his sister was the Chief Nurse.

The first officer and the first three enlisted men killed by enemy activities were members of U.S. Army Base Hospital No. 5, then operating No. 11 General Hospital, British Expeditionary Forces, at Dannes-Camiérs, France. The casualties occurred at 11 p.m., September 4, 1917. The night was particularly clear with unusually bright moonlight. Most of the personnel of the hospital, except those actually on duty, had retired to their quarters. For some reason, however, many of the officers were standing around among their tents conversing when about 11 o'clock a heavy detonation was heard in the distance. A few moments later this was followed by another detonation much nearer to the hospital and in the direction of U.S. Army Base Hospital No. 12, then operating No. 18 General Hospital, British Expeditionary Forces, which was situated only some 300 yards south of Base Hospital No. 5. A few seconds thereafter the distinct sound of an airplane motor was heard immediately overhead, and bombs were dropped in the hospital area. Two landed among the tents occupied by officers of the hospital, one directly west of the door of Ward C-3, one in the east end of Ward C-3 among the patients, and the fifth in the reception tent or pavilion in which a guard and litter party, for the reception of patients arriving at night, were stationed.

³ Sick and Wounded Report, U.S.A. B.H. No. 21, September 1917; also records of British Army.

The first two bombs fell within a few feet of the door of the tent occupied by First Lieut. Wm. T. Fitzsimons,⁴ M.R.C., U.S. Army, Adjutant of the Hospital. Lieut. Fitzsimons was killed instantly. The same bomb also wounded First Lieuts. Clarence A. McGuire,⁵ Thaddeus D. Smith,⁶ and Capt. Rae W. Whidden,⁷ all Medical Reserve Corps; and Pvt. 1st cl. Hiram P. Brower,⁸ Med. Dept., who was on sentry duty patrolling his post within a few feet of the officers' tents. Pvt. 1st cl. Brower was the last person to converse with Lieut. Fitzsimons, who asked him what was happening just before the first bomb landed.

The third bomb killed Pvt. 1st cl. Oscar C. Tugo;⁹ and the fifth one killed Pvt. 1st cl. Leslie H. Woods¹⁰ and Pvt. 1st cl. Rudolph Rubino,¹¹ Medical Department, U. S. Army. These bombs also wounded Pvt. 1st cl. Allen Mason;¹² Pvt. Elmer C. Sloan;¹³ Pvt. 1st cl. John S. Stannion,¹⁴ and Pvt. 1st cl. Aubrey S. McLeod,¹⁵ all of the Medical Department. One enlisted man of the Royal Army Medical Corps on duty at the hospital was wounded at the same time. All of these wounded soldiers recovered, but Pvt. 1st cl. McLeod's wounds were so severe that it was necessary eventually to amputate both thighs just below the hip joints.

Miss Eva J. Parmalee,¹⁶ of Springfield, Mass., a member of the Army Nurse Corps, who was night nurse on duty in Ward C-3 at the time of the bombing, was knocked down, her face abraded in several places, and her clothing torn by fragments of these bombs. She suffered, however, no serious injury. Twenty-two soldiers of the British Army who were patients in the hospital were wounded, two of whom afterwards died as a result of the injuries at that time.

The conduct of the entire personnel of the hospital was most creditable. There was no confusion, and the injured were all promptly removed to the operating pavilion. By 3 A.M., every case had received the necessary medical and surgical treatment. The dead were quickly removed to the mortuary. This work was handled entirely by the personnel of the hospital, although many kindly offers were made by the staffs of adjacent hospitals, notably by that of U.S. Army Base Hospital No. 18; and of No. 22 General Hospital, British Expeditionary Forces, which was largely operated by personnel from Harvard University, who were temporarily serving in the Royal Army Medical Corps.

8, 12, 13, 14, 15, Sick and Wounded Report cards Nos. 93, 94, 95, 96 and 97, U.S.A. B.H. No. 5, September, 1917.

On September 5, 1917, Sgt. Matthew Calderwood¹⁷ and Pvt. Wm. E. Brannigan,¹⁷ both Co. F, 11th U. S. Railway Engineers, received slight wounds from shell fire at Gouzeaucourt, France, while serving with the British Expeditionary Forces.

Lieut. George P. Howe,¹⁸ M.R.C. U.S. Army was killed in action on September 28, 1917, while serving with the 37th Division, British Expeditionary Forces. On October 29, 1917, Pvt. George Ashburn,¹⁹ Company B, 18th Infantry, was wounded by shell fragments.

The first enlisted men of our Army who were actually killed while on duty in the trenches were three privates in Co. F. 16th Infantry, 1st Division. The date was November 3, 1917, and the names were: Thos. F. Enright,²⁰ James D. Gresham,²⁰ and Merle D. Hay.²⁰

The War Department in recognition of the death of the first officer who was killed in our Army has named the largest Army General Hospital—The Fitzsimons General Hospital, U.S. Army, Denver, Colo.—after First Lieut. Wm. T. Fitzsimons, Medical Reserve Corps, U.S. Army, Adjutant of U.S. Army Base Hospital No. 5. The gymnasium located at Carlisle Barracks, the Medical Department school in which we give our medical officers their field training, is named Tugo Hall after Pvt. 1st cl. Oscar C. Tugo, the first enlisted man killed. The City of Boston has also named a square in front of the Harvard Medical School after Pvt. 1st cl. Tugo, a native of that city.

It is not necessary to extend this article further by reference in chronological order to casualties which occurred after November 3, 1917. Their number was great and increased rapidly, and especially so following the battle of Cantigny in May, 1918. It is a matter of pride that after the United States entered the World War the members of the Medical Department were the first to suffer from hostile fire, and to die of battle injuries overseas in their country's service. The subsequent casualties of our Army are only too well known. Among the number, the Medical Department bore its full share.
